

Women, Medicine, and Stories - A Writing Workshop with Saroo Sharda
Friday, June 8, 2-4pm at the Westin Ottawa
$140. +HST

Are you a female physician with stories in your heart? Want to work with a creative writing coach to find out how to write them down?

This two-hour workshop will be a safe space for women physicians to explore their creativity, and take the first steps in writing the stories they want to write. Together we'll explore how writing can be a tool for articulating the complexities of our lives and our work as well as expressing the pain we carry and dancing in the joy we know. We'll unpack how our unique experiences as women in healthcare have shaped us, changed us, and led us to who we are.

You can expect to leave the workshop with:

- Some new, exciting writing, much of which will be pulled from your journey as a woman physician.
- A renewed (or brand new) sense of your writing voice and your unique gifts as a writer.
- A feeling of creative playfulness and possibility.
- Creative courage.
- Ideas and writing prompts which you can take forward into your life and work.
- The opportunity of sending in a piece of your writing for more in-depth feedback after the workshop. The writing coach will send you written feedback on your piece within a few weeks via email. (This is completely optional.)

For all the details including more about your workshop facilitator, trained writing coach and physician, Saroo Sharda, click the link below!

<http://fireflycreativewriting.com/women-medicine-conference-writing-workshop>